

Spiritually Speaking

I have received some input from my valued clients on my news letter requesting more of “me” in it. I am not a writer believe me my children would tell you so. My spelling is atrocious and you all say use the spell check, lady . But that is not so much the issue as grammar and punctuation. If you can tolerate these I will give it a try. This year was a rough one for us all as far as the economy has been, but for me it has made me realize all the more how insignificant material things have come to be. I am part of a family that has pulled together and made the best of things and found that we have laughed more and lived truer to our natures, living with boundaries and realizing our needs can be met with out money but in spiritual awareness. This has been a year where living laughing and sharing with family and friends has brought enlightenment with love. It has taught me to believe in my abilities even when it seemed at odds with what is going on around me. The validations I have received have blown me away and with out a doubt I know I am here to serve and be happy. For the new year there will be no financial struggles as I now live what I have learned, that what you think, speak and feel you live. We are all connected and when we look down or speak ill of another even in sarcasms and when we think those things about our selves we muck around in negative waters. I still have a long way to go to be the spiritual person I aspire to be, to live in the joy of the moment, but now I know how to do it and all there is left is practice.
